Cancer Receipts Reach New High

Receipts of the American Cancer Society in Virginia for the current year have reached an all - time high of $673,355, it was announced today by Morrill M. Crowe, of Richmond, State Chairman of the 1963 Cancer Crusade.

Mr. Crowe made his announcement following a meeting in Richmond of the Executive Committee of the Society's Virginia Division. He said that the Cancer Society's program year closes August 31, and that additional receipts are expected to raise the 1963 Crusade total to $705,000 or more. Last year's total was $672,125.

In a ten year period, the Society's receipts in Virginia have steadily increased from $281,568 in 1954 to this year's total of $673,355.

Thousands of volunteer workers in Virginia have been participating in the Division's educational and fund - raising campaign. Funds received will be used, according to Mr. Crowe, to finance public and professional education activities, services to cancer patients, and the National Society's research program.

The Virginia Division is made up of 103 Local Units representing all counties and cities in the state.

1964 Wheat Prgram

In response to questions raised since the wheat quota referendum on May 21, J. A. Martin, Chairman of the county ASC Organization and Conservation, Appomattox County Committee, today reviewed certain wheat program provisions still in effect under existing law.

For 1964, the Chairman, explained, the legislation provided that price - support at 50 percent of parity — about $1.25 per bushel, on the average — will be available to producers who plant within the acreage allotments which were established before the referendum. There will be no quota penalties for planting in excess of 1964 acreage allotments. However, ineligibility for the 1964 allotments would reduce the acreage history credit for future allotments.

Farmers who have Conservation Reserve contracts agreed to plant within the larger of the farm acreage allotment or 15 acres, and this means that the 1964 Conservation Reserve payment for the farm is dependent on planting within this acreage.

Excess wheat for the 1963 crop —since it is still subject to marketing quotas — may be stored by the producer in order to avoid payment of the penalty and loss of history in the establishment of future allotments. After July 1, 1964 this tored excess wheat may be released without payment of penalty.

Why Should I Care

Lesson for July 28, 1963

One Story can have many points. It can be used to illustrate more truths than one. The story of Cain and Abel is a case in point. A thoughtful reader can see in this story how sin gathers weight like an avalanche, moving slowly at first, just a little snowslide, but finally picking up boulders and entire houses, crushing everything in its path. Sin that begins with something attractive and pleasant (like eating fruit) before long becomes violent, ugly, repulsive, like murder. The reader can also see in the story of Cain and Abel that sin needs very little excuse to break out. Not long ago a young man in Virginia murdered three people on one afternoon. The reason for one of them (the three were one family) had "annoyed Sam" at his work. The brutal young man made criticism an excuse for murder.

God's two questions

But we shall not be speaking of those and other aspects of this sad story only of one part of it. The first question which God asks, in the Bible story, is "Where are you?" The next question is "Who told you—?" Shortly afterward, "What is this that you have done?" Then in the story of Cain and Abel, again God opens with a question: "Where is Abel, you brother?" Where are you? Who told you he lie you have believed? What have you done? Adam and Eve had not expected those questions. Neither was Cain looking for the question he got. Cain thought he had finished with Abel. That chapter was closed. The account was balanced. He drew a bloody finger across the page. But God faced him with a question. If Cain expected God to take any interest or to make any comment on what Cain considered to be his own affair, it would be an attack, an accusation. But all God does is ask a simple question. It is the most important question there is, next to "Where are you?"

Keeper or brother?

Perhaps Cain thought that a God who would ask questions instead of coming down at once with a curse, must be a weak God. At any rate he makes no defense. His reply is another question, an insolent one: "Am I my brother's keeper?" That was not the point, as Dr. James W. Clarke of Richmond has said. No, Cain was not Abel's keeper, of course not. "Who wants a keeper?' Nobody wants a keeper. But everybody needs a brother. Abel needed a brother, and Cain had not been one.

But the sin of murder does not begin, usually, all at once. This crime of Cain's began with a refusal: a refusal to be a keeper, when after all a keeper was not called for. He was responsible for Abel; that was something that perhaps had never occurred to him. And if it had, he shrugged it off. If he could forget that Abel was a brother, then what happened to Abel, even what he himself did to Abel, didn't matter,—so he thought.

Responsibility:

to God, for our brother

What is the root of the troubles in today's world? A great deal of it (though of course not all, for the roots of evil are many!) is just this indifference to what happenens to other people. We don't want to be responsible, and when we do start to help some one else, we want to be keeper, not brother. We are willing to tell other people where to get off, we may like to run their affairs, to think and plan for them; but this is not brotherhood. To be responsible for others is not to live their lives for them. It is treating them like brothers. Once you get to the point of indifference where you don't really care what happens to another person, you are close to no caring even if he is murdered . . .And that, in the eyes of God is not far from doing the murder yourself. How many juvenile delinquents have gone down into worse ways because no man would be an older brother to one of them? How many marriages have gone on the rocks because their friends, who could see it coming, did nothing to stave off the tragedy? How many young people have taken the road to alcoholism because their parents didn't feel responsible for setting an example of temperance and self-denial? How many lives have been wasted because there was no one who really cared?

Pastor Says—

HOW BIG IS YOUR BIBLE? A minister discovered the Book of Jonah had been cut from his Bible. Under questioning his young son confessed he was guilty. When pressed for a reason he said 'You dad, never believed it, you never preached from it, or read it in family devotions, so what good is it? It might as well be cu out'. Johiakin, a king in Israel, discovered God's word was distasteful, so he took his penknife and cut the pages and cast them in the fire on the hearth. —Jeremiah 36:23) These two are not the last ones to mutilate God's word. Some wouldn't dare cut the pages from God's book, but they never make any attempt to live by its precepts. My dad told a story about a man who tore the pages from the family Bible to 'roll his own cigarette.' When admonished for doing such an unsafe thing he replied, "I got more out of it than most other people".

What is our Bible for? Do we put it in a neat place in the home as a shrine before whom we worship, or is it the 'God-Breathed Word', to be read and lived?

Some Christians use only a part of the Book, relecting other parts. We do this, either because we don't understand, and make no effort to let the Holy Spirit reveal it to us or, we don't like the fruit a particular part bringes us. We leave it off which means we might as well cut it out.

It is like a person who will eat English Walnuts, but will not eat Black Walnuts, because they are so hard to crack.

The Bible cries out against injustice in many realms of life. We rationalize those parts that do not follow our particular tradition or custom, But when it comes to the promises of salvation and the future life, we look on for dear life. When it talks about gossip, backbiting or tattling, we usually say but that is not for me. But let it speak about eternal life, a home in heaven, we say that's for me.

The Bible is God's message to man — to man in all areas and circumstances of living. It is to be read and grasped by the help of the Holy Spirit.

It reveals Christ, our Saviour and Lord, and his place in your life and mine. Take another look at your Bible. Go into your parlor, or wherever you have it. Take it down, brush off the dust. Begin reading it, asking yourself, what does God have to say to me? It will begin to speak to you. Strangely, it will become relevant to your need. God does have some word for you, and he will communicate it to you. This will lead you to find some place to study God's word. Here you may feel your need to become active in Bible Study through Sunday School, or some other activity your Church offers for enlarging the Bible in your life. It may not have all the answers to your needs, but it will put you in touch with one — Christ — who is the answer to your life's needs. Take it with you as you worship God in His House this Sunday.
